Under the seas

'Nautilus' embarks on Nemo's origin story adventure

By Sarah Passingham
TV Media

Deep beneath the fabled Pillars of Halvar lies Viking treasure waiting to be plucked from the abyss. The only thing stopping one enterprising prisoner from liberating it is a vessel that can reach it. Inspired by the enduring science fiction novel "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" by author Jules Verne, "Nautilus," premiering Sunday, June 29, on AMC and AMC+, tells the story of how Nemo took the helm of the infamous submarine.

Portrayed by "Star Trek: Discovery" star Shazad Latif, audiences meet Capt. Nemo in "Nautilus" as a prisoner of the East India Mercantile Company. An Indian prince stripped of his status and ripped from his family, Nemo is forced to work for the company, designing the engines of a secret submersible, the Nautilus.

"The corporation's more powerful than any country," Director Crawley (Damien Garvey, "The Artful Dodger") says in the official trailer for the upcoming series. "We must maintain dominance. That is why the Nautilus was developed." Conceived as a weapon to maintain the colonizer's borders, Nemo emancipates the vessel for his own exploits. When the company's plans change, forcing them to launch the Nautilus earlier than anticipated, Nemo's rebellion gathers at a moment's notice to get ahead of them.

In an act of revenge against the people who took everything from him, Nemo plots to steal the ship and set off on an adventure to retrieve buried riches. With a hastily-assembled crew on board, Nemo leaves the penal colony in the periscope's rear-view, but the East India Mercantile Company are not willing to let the Nautilus go without a fight.

Also starring in the 10-part adventure series are Georgia Flood ("Apples Never Fall") as hostage-turned-crew member Humility Lucas; Céline Menville ("Emily in Paris") as Loti; Thierry Frémont ("Das Boot") as Benoit; Richard E. Grant ("The Franchise") as White Rajah; Anna Torv ("The Newsreader") as Revna; and Noah Taylor ("So Long, Marianne") as Capt. Mogg.

It's nearly impossible to quietly execute a prisoner uprising, and Nemo's big departure only gives him and his crew a bit of a head start.

"She is mine. I want her back," Crawley says of the pilfered vessel in the trailer. He is talking to the right guy, Youngblood (Jacob Collins-Levy, "Young Wallander"), who tells Crawley: "If you're looking for someone to bring Nemo back in chains, I'm your man." It's not hard to find Nemo's trail, as it seems he makes quite an impression on everyone he meets.

Described by various characters as a convict, pirate, stubborn, brave and angry in the trailer, Nemo is on a mission to get to the mythic treasure he's after, letting the undetectable submarine be the cover that his spirit does not afford him. There is simply too much on the line to worry about anything more than being the first to lay eyes on the buried riches that might be the only thing to secure everyone's sovereignty.

Along the way, Nemo and the crew of the Nautilus encounter formidable deep sea creatures and explore the incredible unknown landscape of the ocean floor on the way to their destination of the North East Passage. Chased at sea and on land by those who want either the same fortune they are after or the treasure of the Nautilus, Nemo and the crew must work together to maintain their freedom.

"Nautilus" was created and written by James Dormer ("Devils") and series directors include Michael Matthews ("Love and Monsters," 2020), Ben C. Lucas ("The Wilds") and Isabelle Sieb ("Shetland").

Latif, who will be seen next as Edgar Linton in the buzzy Emerald Fennell ("Promising Young Woman," 2020) -directed adaptation of the timeless Emily Bronte-penned novel "Wuthering Heights" early next year, spoke to Yahoo UK about portraying a new angle of another well-known character.

"It's very rare you get the origin story of a character who's usually in the old film — the James Mason ["A Star is Born," 1954] film and all the iterations of it — he's a mysterious character," the "Toast of London" actor explained.

"In the book as well, you don't really know his past, he's very vague and that's sort of the thing, but in this, we get to explore this very flawed, very complex character who's on a ship with 10 other brown men, we rarely get shows like that," Latif continued.

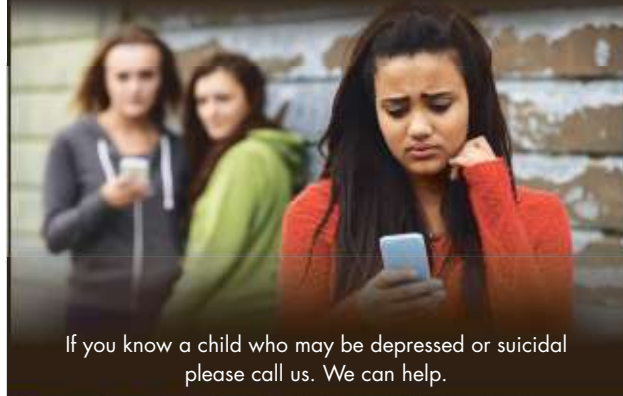

The North American premiere of "Nautilus" has been on deck for a while. The series was initially ordered and produced as a Disney+ venture, but in August 2023, the streamer dropped the series — which had already been filmed — to cut costs, just one of many projects that were scrapped that year by major entertainment companies. "Nautilus" was picked up and has aired through other distributors internationally and finally makes its debut this side of the pond very soon.

Exploring new depths, "Nautilus" premieres Sunday, June 29, on AMC and AMC+.

Best of barbecue: Food Network offers all-day grilling content for Fourth of July

By Caroline Collacutt
TV Media

Enjoy your Independence Day with a side of hot-and-delicious barbecue, as grill-loving episodes of “BBQ Brawl” and “Diners, Drive-Ins and Dives” air on Food Network all day Friday, July 4.

To start the day off strong, grab a bib, some napkins and dive into four delicious episodes from Season 6 of “BBQ Brawl.” This mouthwatering series joins celebrity chefs Bobby Flay (“Beat Bobby Flay”) and Michael Symon (“Symon’s Dinners Cooking Out”) as they coach eight of the country’s most respected barbecue cooks through a slate of increasingly difficult barbecue feats. This season, Maneet Chauhan (“Maneet’s Eats”) and Antonia Lofaso (“Guy’s Grocery Games”) hop on board as the series’ esteemed team captains, each bringing their own unique flavors to the cook-out.

First, Bobby fights to defend his culinary crown against Maneet and Antonia in an episode that finds the bunch working side-by-side in a “build-a-better-burger” relay race that offers a finger lickin’ good advantage to its winner. Throughout the day, fans can watch as the chefs tackle spicy challenges; cook global dishes over live-fire cooking apparatuses from around the world; take part in a blind taste test and more, concluding with a “Texas-sized” chili cook-off meant to feed a crowd of hungry locals.

When Flay, Symon and the rest sign off for the day, Guy Fieri (“Tournament of Champions”) takes the wheel, offering viewers a cross-country exploration of some of the best barbecue, burger and rib joints

America has to offer as he drives coast to coast looking for the tastiest (and messiest) eats around.

From smash burgers in Boston to smokin’ wings in Vermont, Fieri covers some of the hottest spots in the east, tasting smoked bacon meatloaf, carnitas and barbecue in Georgia; wild boar sausage and house-cured bacon in Florida; and a “Texas-style” spot serving southern comfort in Virginia.

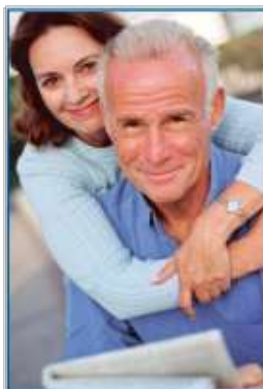

Over in Texas, Fieri continues his mission to savor southern flavors, but finds a few surprising twists as he tries a burger with bologna in Fort Worth; eats at a Dallas-area Ethiopian joint offering brisket injera nachos; and stops in San Antonio for a lesson in cooking monster-thick pork chops before diving into a pile of smokey, delicious barbecue.

Offering ample inspiration for an evening by the grill, “BBQ Brawl” and “Diners, Drive-Ins and Dives” aim to make your Independence Day delicious, airing nonstop episodes Friday, July 4, on Food Network.
